BIOGRAPHICAL/HISTORICAL NOTE

James Govan Taliaferro was born in Amherst, Va., on September 28, 1798, to Zachariah Taliaferro and Sally Warwick. The family moved to Claiborne County, Miss., in 1806, and to Catahoula Parish, La., in 1815, where Zachariah operated a sawmill with Charles Patteson.

James Taliaferro graduated from Transylvania College in Lexington, Ky., and married Elizabeth M.B. Williamson of Lexington in 1819. Taliaferro practiced law in Harrisonburg, La., served as a judge in Catahoula Parish, and was a member of the Catahoula Parish Police Jury (1859-1860). He owned and operated the Harrisonburg Independent (1856(?)-1861) and represented Catahoula Parish in the constitutional convention of 1852 and the secession convention of 1861. Taliaferro was a strong opponent of secession and refused to sign the ordinance; two of his sons served in the Union Army during the Civil War. He later served as an associate justice on the Louisiana Supreme Court (1866-1876) and a delegate to the constitutional convention of 1868. James G. Taliaferro died in Harrisonburg, La., on October 13, 1876.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Papers consist of letters, reports, business records, printed items, and other materials documenting political, economic, and social conditions in Louisiana. Legal and business papers of Zachariah Taliaferro pertain to his sawmills in Virginia and Catahoula Parish, La., in partnership with Charles Patteson (1804-1824).

Letters show Judge James G. Taliaferro's interest and activity in Louisiana politics, particularly in the Whig and later in the Republican Party, from such prominent men as Joseph Walker, W. P. Kellogg, J. Madison Wells, General W. S. Hancock, J. R. G. Pittkin, and others. Scattered copies of the Harrisonburg (La.) Independent, of which Taliaferro was publisher, reflect his Unionist sympathies in the Louisiana Secession Convention (1861). Also included are a number of slave sales and a letter from a father searching for his daughter, a former slave who had been purchased by Taliaferro (1871).

Papers for the Reconstruction period reflect certain economic and social conditions in Louisiana in addition to political situations and pertain to Taliaferro's work as an associate justice of the Louisiana Supreme Court, as president of the Louisiana Constitutional Convention of 1868 and as candidate for governor. Taliaferro's opponent, Henry Clay Warmoth, was elected governor.
